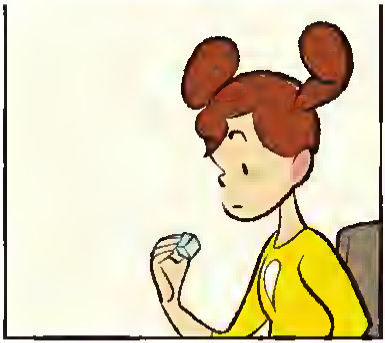
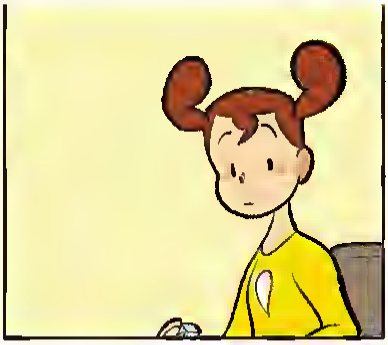
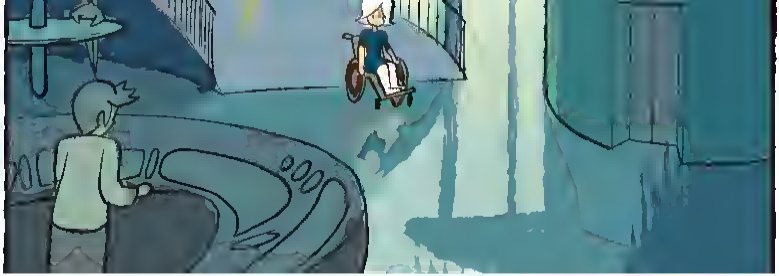
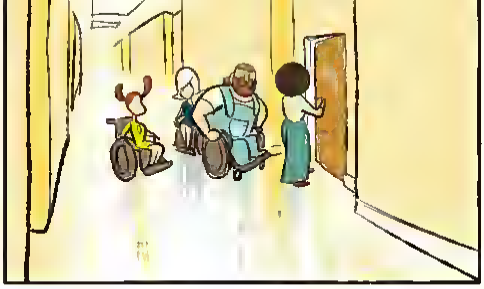
Lots to catch up on!

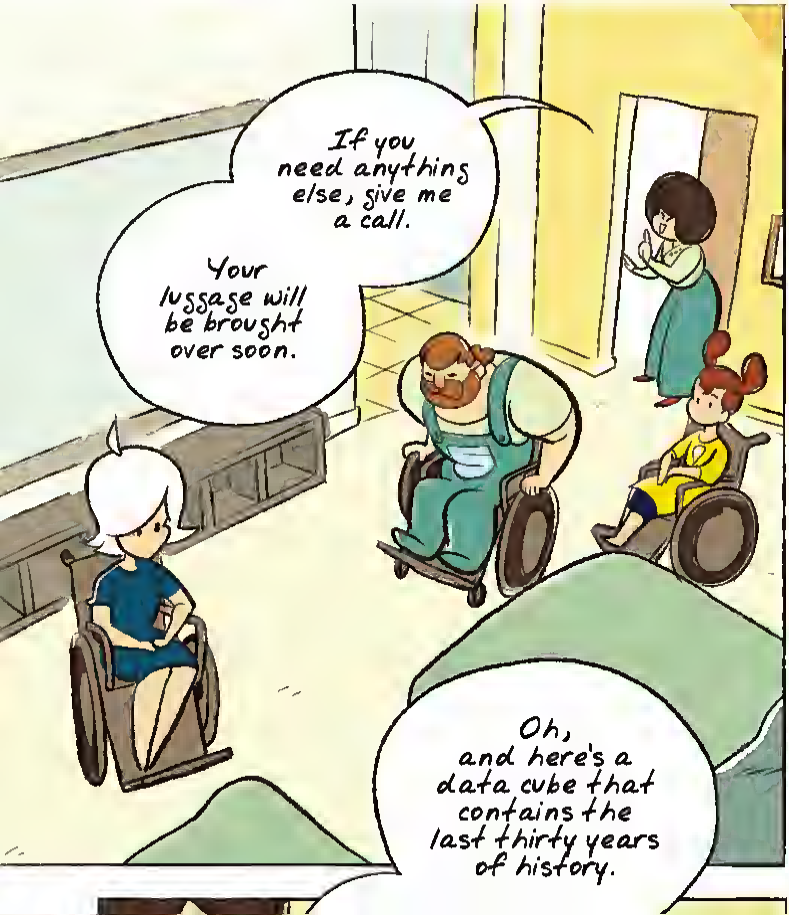




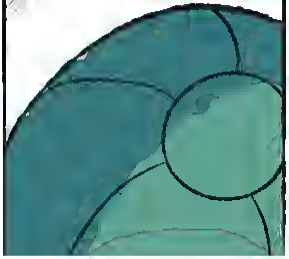


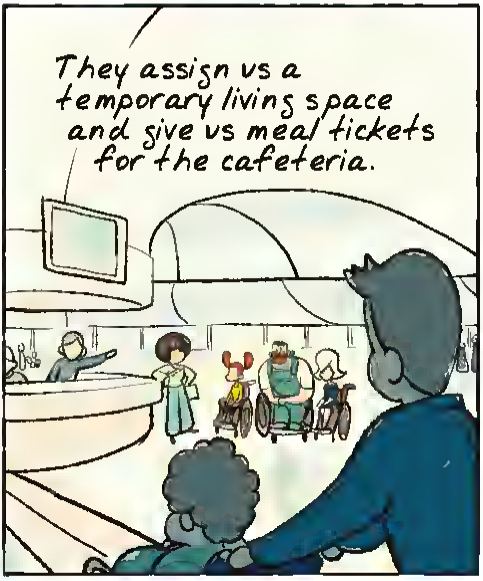
On the mining colony,



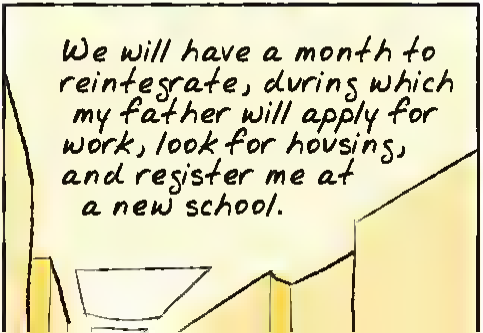


If you need anything else, give me a call.
Your luggage will be brought over soon.
Oh, and here's a data cube that contains the last thirty years of history.





They assign us a temporary living space and give us meal tickets for the cafeteria.



We will have a month to reintegrate, during which my father will apply for work, look for housing, and register me at a new school.

Amy, your father and I are going to a seminar on how to use net gear.
Would you like to come?
What's net gear?

I'm
sorry, Jemmah.

Oh, Jemmah's my mom. Hold on.
Mom! Someone on the phone for you!
Who is it?
I don't know, some girl.
Well, give me the phone.

Earth.

It's not what I expected.

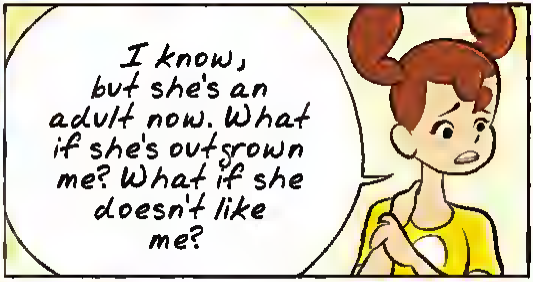
Why don't you call her?

Call her?

Sure. I'll bet she's been waiting a long time to hear from you.



I know, but she's an adult now. What if she's outgrown me? What if she doesn't like me?

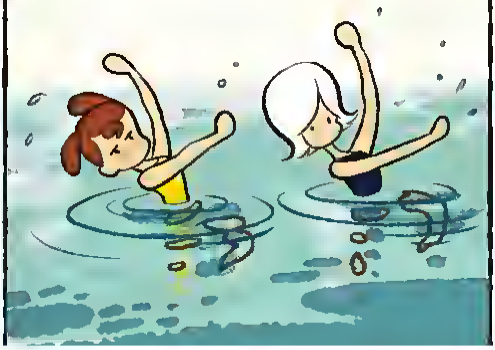
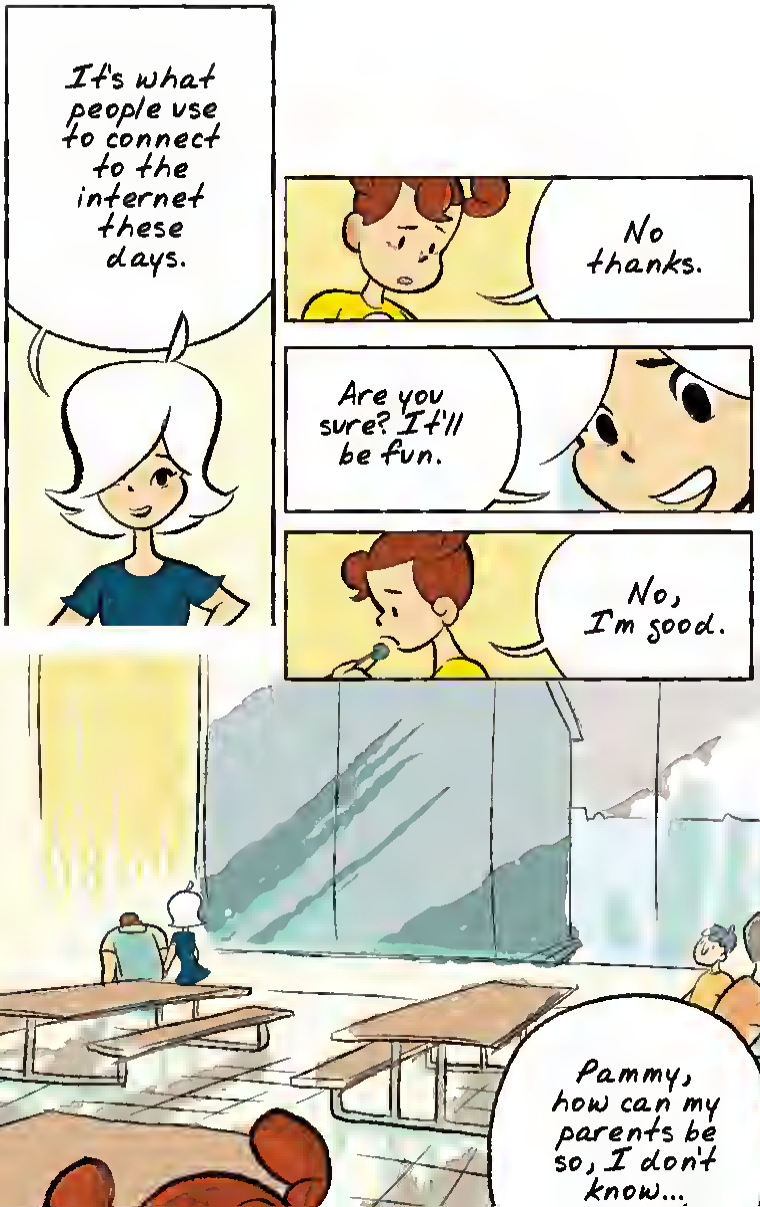
Who wouldn't like a sweet girl water was a precious resource you had to carefully recycle, so it's amazing to see so much water in one place.

But I think we look really dumb.



Thankfully, we soon graduate from the swimming pool to the weight room.



It's what people use to connect to the internet these days.
No thanks.
Are you sure? It'll be fun.
No, I'm good.
Pammy, how can my parents be so, I don't know...

like you?
Go on, give her a call.

*Event period: Apr 1 to 15. More details are on the NOTICE page

We meet an elderly couple named Pammy and Eli. They are from a deep space colony like us.

They both have the same flavor, which I've noticed is common for people who have been married a long time.

We take an elevator ride down to the reintegration facility.

I'm just not ready yet.

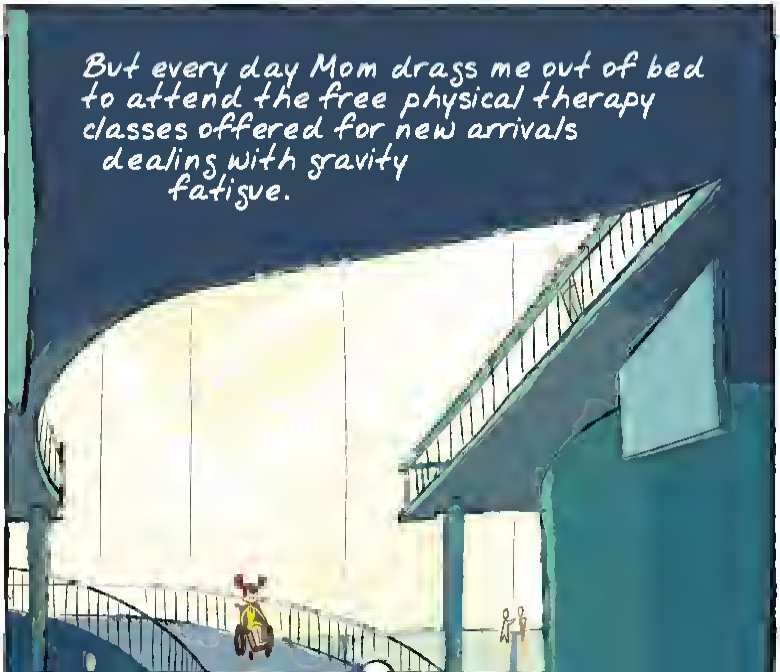
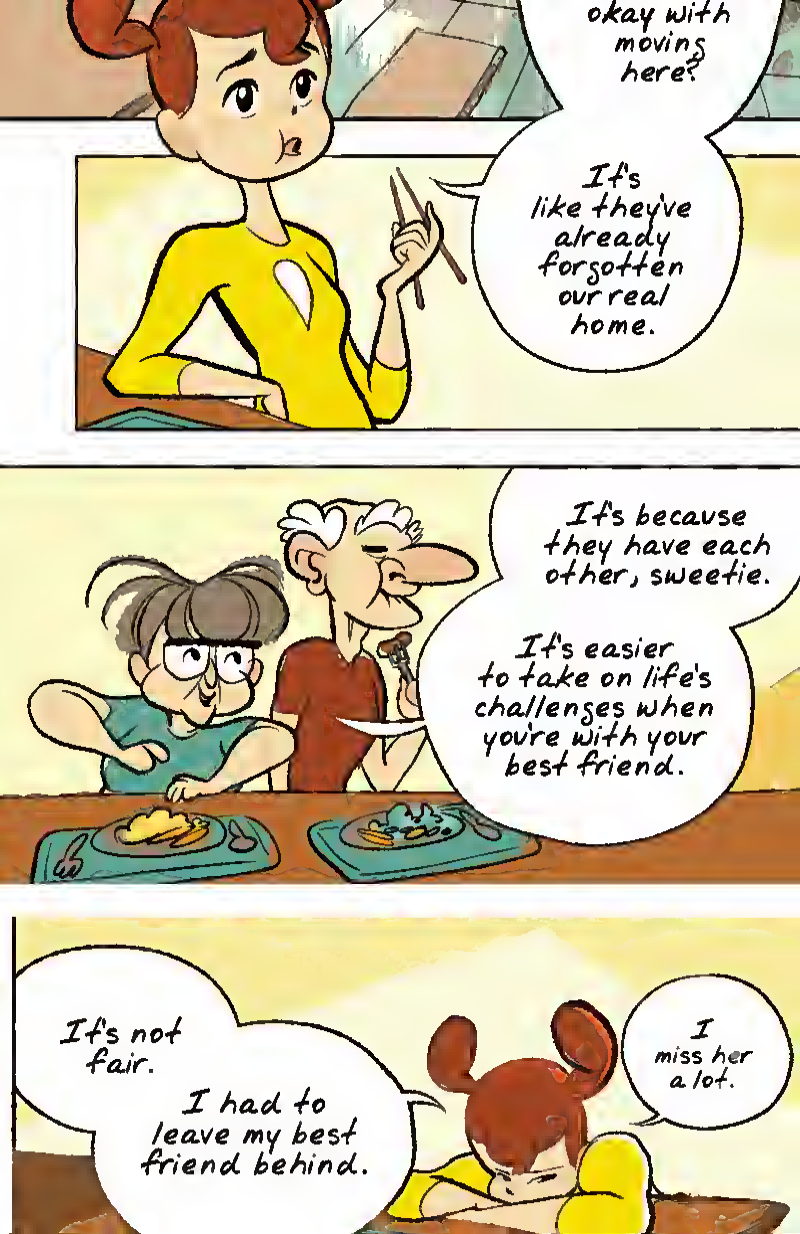
That month, all I want to do is eat and sleep.



But every day Mom drags me out of bed to attend the free physical therapy classes offered for new arrivals dealing with gravity fatigue.



okay with movin here?
It's like they've already forgotten our real home.
It's because they have each other, sweetie.
It's easier to take on life's challenges when you're with your best friend.
It's not fair.
I had to leave my best friend behind.
I miss her a lot.
